Egbewole tasks staff on alternative research funding

By Tajudeen Babamale

The Vice Chancellor of the University of Ilorin, Prof. Wahab Olasupo Egbewole, SAN, has urged academic staff of the College of Health Sciences to explore and attract research funding from sources beyond the Tertiary Education Trust Fund (TETFund).

Prof. Egbewole made the call last Wednesday (January 14, 2026) at the 2026 Annual Get-together of the College of Health Sciences, held at the New College Complex of the University of Ilorin.

Represented by the Deputy Vice Chancellor (Management Services), Prof. Adegboyega Adisa Fawole, the Vice-Chancellor noted that while TETFund remains a critical intervention agency, there are numerous local and international funding bodies available to support research and innovation.

While stating that the University leadership is committed to addressing the infrastructural and administrative challenges confronting the College, he said funding remains a major constraint, largely due to limitations associated with Federal Government allocations. "There are many research funding agencies across the globe aside from TETFund", he said, adding, "We hope that in the nearest future, the College will become one of the biggest benefactors to the University through the volume of research grants it attracts."

Reflecting on the significance of the annual get-together, the Vice Chancellor said the event underscored the core values cherished by the University of Ilorin, including unity, love, and mutual respect, saying that the University community continues to thrive on peaceful coexistence across religious, cultural, gender, and professional lines.

He cited examples of interfaith solidarity within the University, noting that Muslim staff traditionally visit their Christian colleagues during Christmas celebrations, while Christian staff reciprocate during the Ileya (Eid-el-Kabir) festivities.

According to him, this culture of unity in diversity, shared joy, and intellectual collaboration has continued to promote the University's academic, intellectual, social, and cultural advancement. "The University of Ilorin has a peculiar culture which you have demonstrated today. We mix together in joyfulness and interaction, creating a smooth and conducive environment that enables progress. At the end of the day, we are better off socially, mentally stronger, and physically united," he said.

Earlier in his address, the Provost of the College of Health Sciences, Prof. Sulyman Biodun Alabi, described the 2026 Annual Get-together as a historic occasion, noting that it would be his last as provost.

Reflecting on his tenure, particularly the cordial and productive relationship the College enjoyed with the Vice-Chancellor over the past three years, the Provost said the strong collaboration had translated into significant infrastructural and institutional developments.

While mentioning the ongoing construction of a 300-capacity Lecture Theatre at the New College Complex, which he said had reached about 48 per cent completion, the Provost also commended the Vice-Chancellor for approving the expansion of lecture theatres at the old College, an intervention he said had attracted commendation from various regulatory and accreditation bodies.

Prof. Alabi further appreciated the University management for the provision of solar-powered lighting across key facilities in the College. He listed installations including 10KVA solar systems for the Provost's Office, the Dean of Clinical Sciences, the Basic Medical Sciences and Clinical Sciences buildings, the College Library, and the Anatomy Department, as well as 5KVA systems each for Lecture Halls A and B. He noted that these interventions had ensured reliable power supply across major service points within the College.

Beyond infrastructure, the Provost thanked the University management for the confidence reposed in him through his appointment, noting that the position made him eligible for election as Chairman of the Association of Provosts of Colleges of Medicine in Nigeria (APCOM).

According to him, his election to the national position has created opportunities to facilitate infrastructure development across selected Colleges of Health Sciences in Nigeria, and most recently, N110 Billion Medical Education Fund approved by President Tinubu for 18 universities, to target infrastructure upgrades in order to boost medical school capacity and address doctor shortages.

Prof. Alabi commended members of staff for their dedication and commitment to the growth of the College and gave special recognition to the Deputy Director of Works in charge of the College, Engr. Sunday Omale Aloga, for his honesty, faithfulness, and exemplary professionalism, which he said contributed immensely to the successful execution of projects within the College.

In their separate goodwill messages, the Dean of the Faculty of Clinical Sciences, Prof. Kolawole Wasiu Wahab; the Dean of the Faculty of Basic Clinical Sciences, Prof. Hannah Oluwayemisi Olawumi; and the Dean of the Faculty of Basic Medical Sciences, Prof. Luqman Aribidesi Olayaki, expressed appreciation to the Vice-Chancellor, the Provost, and their respective staff for their consistent support. They, however, used the occasion to present the challenges facing their faculties to the University Administration.

Egbewole urges ITF to support graduates with startup funding

The Vice Chancellor acknowledged the importance of entrepreneurship education and practical skills acquisition, but stressed that such efforts must be complemented with post-graduation support to ensure sustainability.

He also expressed concern over the gap that often arises after graduation, when students who have acquired skills and developed viable ideas are unable to implement them due to lack of capital. He noted that without access to funding, many promising ideas are at risk of being abandoned.

Prof. Egbewole, therefore, urged the ITF to initiate programmes that would provide financial backing or startup grants for graduates, describing such support as essential to translating skills acquisition into tangible economic outcomes.

Speaking earlier, the Director of Student Industrial Work Experience Scheme (SIWES), University of Ilorin, Prof. Roland Monday Kayode, appreciated the University management for its continued support, particularly the approval of a proposal submitted by the SIWES Centre by the Senate of the University. He pointed out that the new policy would significantly improve the assessment and grading process of students participating in the SIWES programme.

The Director said the revised grading system would integrate inputs from multiple stakeholders involved in the programme, which include assessments from industry-based supervisors, institution-based supervisors within the University, as well as lecturers directly in charge of SIWES students. He stated that the contributions from all these parties would be collated and harmonised to arrive at a final score for each student.

Meanwhile, the Head of Training of the Industrial Trust Fund (ITF), Mr Onipede Ibrahim, who led the ITF delegation, commended the University of Ilorin for its outstanding performance in the implementation of the Students Industrial Work Experience Scheme (SIWES).

Mr Ibrahim described the SIWES Pre-Placement Orientation Programme as a routine but critical exercise designed to adequately prepare students and all relevant stakeholders for effective participation in the scheme.

He noted that, based on available records, the University of Ilorin remains the best-performing institution in the execution of SIWES in Kwara State, describing the feat as commendable. He added that the consistency and professionalism of the University SIWES Unit have continued to set a standard worthy of emulation.

Mr Ibrahim specifically praised the SIWES Unit for its accessibility and responsiveness, noting that the Unit is always available to provide necessary information and guidance to students and stakeholders.

The ITF official further disclosed that the Fund has several intervention programmes aimed at supporting society through skills development and capacity building. He encouraged the University of Ilorin, particularly its Entrepreneurship Centre, to explore opportunities to key into some of these programmes for the benefit of students and the wider community.

VC urges students to become employers, not job seekers

Represented by the Deputy Vice Chancellor (Management Services), Prof. Adegboyega Adisa Fawole, the Vice-Chancellor stressed that beneficiaries of the programme should not be looking for paid employment after graduation, as the training and exposure provided are meant to empower them to create opportunities for themselves and others.

He noted that it always gladdens his heart to encounter young people who show genuine enthusiasm for entrepreneurship, describing such passion as a critical ingredient for personal success and national development, especially in the face of shrinking white-collar job opportunities.

Prof. Egbewole described the U-INSPIRE programme as a strategic intervention of the University aimed at complementing formal academic learning with hands-on skills acquisition. He explained that the programme focuses on ideation, vocational training, digital skills and entrepreneurship capacity development, thereby preparing students to compete effectively in today's dynamic economy.

The Vice Chancellor expressed concern over the disturbing trend of highly qualified graduates, including first-class degree holders as well as Master and PhD graduates, who still struggle to secure employment after graduation. He noted that this reality underscores the need for students to think innovatively and embrace skills that promote self-employment.

While encouraging participants not to despise humble beginnings, Prof. Egbewole explained that many successful enterprises started small but grew into large ventures through commitment, consistency and hard work.

He, however, reaffirmed the commitment of the University of Ilorin to producing well-rounded graduates, stressing that the institution would continue to support programmes and initiatives that empower students with both academic knowledge and practical skills needed to thrive in an increasingly competitive global economy.

In a chat with UNILORIN Bulletin, the Director of the U-INSPIRE programme, Prof. Rasheed Jimoh, said the orientation was aimed at familiarising students with the U-INSPIRE platform and enlightening them on the significance of the programme in shaping their minds for the demands of modern and innovative work environments.

While saying students are currently learning a wide range of skills, including leadership, graphic design, web development, among others, he revealed that starting next year, the U-INSPIRE programme will expand into a full-fledged curriculum that would allow students to register from 100 Level through 400 Level to enable them participate in the programme over one to four years, depending on their level, and gain sustained exposure to practical skills and company-based experiences.

Prof. Jimoh, however, stated that about 70% of students who participated in the maiden edition of the programme last session were able to meet the minimum requirements for certification, which qualifies them for further engagement through internships, adding that, Only the most outstanding students will be selected for a two-month internship, designed to ensure that serious and committed participants are recognised and given practical opportunities to apply their skills.

He added that during the internships, students are required to develop projects, compete with their peers, and collaborate with partner organisations.

By Bashir Dawodu and Bashirat Omotosho

The Vice Chancellor of the University of Ilorin, Prof. Wahab Olasupo Egbewole, SAN, has charged students of the University preparing for the Students' Industrial Work Experience Scheme (SIWES) to maximise every opportunity and knowledge gained during their industrial training, noting that no form of learning is ever wasted.

Prof. Egbewole gave the charge last Wednesday, (January 14, 2025) while declaring open the 2026 SIWES Pre-Placement Orientation Programme, held at the University Multipurpose Hall.

The Vice Chancellor, who was represented by the Deputy Vice Chancellor (Management Services), Prof. Adegboyega Adisa Fawole, urged the students to see the programme as a platform to develop their critical thinking skills that would enable them to contribute meaningfully to societal transformation and create value that could translate into economic benefits.

He congratulated the students for being privileged to participate in the SIWES programme, an opportunity, he noted, is not available to everyone. He encouraged them to seize the opportunity and make it count in their lives.

Prof. Egbewole further advised the students to manage their time wisely, stressing that time once lost can never be regained.

He also urged them to apply the knowledge acquired during the training to improve and modernise their family businesses, reaffirming the University's confidence in their abilities.

In his welcome address, the Director of the SIWES Unit, University of Ilorin, Prof. Rowland M. Kayode, disclosed that the University would be releasing 6,273 students from 12 Faculties, excluding those from affiliated institutions, for industrial training within and outside the country.

Prof. Rowland explained that the industrial training programme is designed to expose students to the practical application of theories learned in the classroom, thereby bridging the gap between academic knowledge and industry practice.

"The most effective strategy for building manpower and resourcefulness among our graduates for industry is to promote knowledge sharing and technology transfer between academia and industry", he said.

Prof. Rowland appreciated the Vice Chancellor and the University Administration for their continued support of the SIWES Unit, and also acknowledged the cooperation of the Industrial Training Fund (ITF), Ilorin Area Office, and its headquarters in Jos.

He advised the students to conduct themselves responsibly during the training and to ensure proper documentation in their logbooks.

Egbewole, Emir of Ilorin, Al-Hikmah founder, others attend "Kuliyan Gari" book launch ...Abdulbaqi calls for responsible and productive citizenship

By Mustafa Abubakar

The Vice Chancellor of the University of Ilorin, Prof. Wahab Olasupo Egbewole, SAN; the Emir of Ilorin and Chairman of the Kwara State Council of Chiefs, Alhaji Ibrahim Sulu-Gambari; the founder of Al-Hikmah University, Chief AbdulRaheem Oladimeji; and other eminent personalities witnessed the public presentation of the book "Kuliya of Ilorin: A Life of Purpose" last Thursday (January 15, 2026), with a strong call on Nigerians to deliberately invest in mentoring young people in character formation and entrepreneurship for national development.

The book was written by a former National Auditor of the Nigeria Union of Journalists and former Chairman of the Kwara State Council of the Union, Comrade Abiodun Abdulkareem.

The event, which also featured the unveiling of the Kuliyan Gari of Ilorin Emirate National Youth Mentorship Summit, was held at Al-Hikmah University, Ilorin.

Speaking at the well-attended event, the Vice Chancellor of the University of Ilorin, who was the Chairman of the occasion, Prof. Wahab Olasupo Egbewole, SAN, described it as a celebration of exemplary leadership, service to humanity and the enduring values of mentorship.

He noted that the life and achievements of the Kuliyan Gari of Ilorin, Prof. Yusuf Olaolu-Ali, SAN, epitomise integrity, discipline and selfless service—virtues which, he said, universities and society must continue to instil in the younger generation.

Represented by the Deputy Vice Chancellor (Research, Technology and Innovation), Prof. Muhtar Etudaye, the Vice Chancellor commended the author, Comrade Abdulkareem, for documenting a life of purpose and impact, describing the book as a valuable contribution to leadership literature and youth development discourse.

He added that the University of Ilorin was proud of the author as an alumnus and of the honouree whose achievements continue to inspire students and professionals across disciplines.

Speaking on the theme of the programme, the Dean, Faculty of Communication and Information Sciences, University of Ilorin, Professor Saudat Salah Abdulbaqi, who described mentorship as a purposeful and intentional act of guiding the youth towards becoming good members of the society, noted that investing in youth mentorship is an investment in the future of the nation.

She explained that mentorship should begin at home, where young people are prepared for future responsibilities, adding that digital platforms could be effectively deployed to enrol youths for mentorship programmes, employment opportunities and entrepreneurial development.

The don urged young people to see mentorship initiatives provided for them as acts of charity and goodwill, encouraging them to take full advantage of such opportunities.

She further admonished the youth to always think about giving back to society, no matter how little, in order to improve the lives of the less privileged.

In his remarks, the Vice Chancellor of Al-Hikmah University, Prof. Lateef Folorunsho Oladimeji, who also represented the founder of the University, Chief AbdulRaheem Oladimeji, said the institution was proud to host a programme that celebrates excellence, integrity and service to humanity, describing Prof. Yusuf Ali, SAN, as a worthy role model whose life exemplifies the values of scholarship, philanthropy and moral uprightness.

Also speaking, the Vice Chancellor of Fountain University, Osogbo, Prof. Ramot Olayinka Karim, described the honouree as a rare blend of intellectual excellence, moral uprightness and uncommon generosity, noting that Prof. Yusuf Ali, SAN, has consistently used his knowledge, influence and resources to uplift humanity and promote education, peace and social harmony.

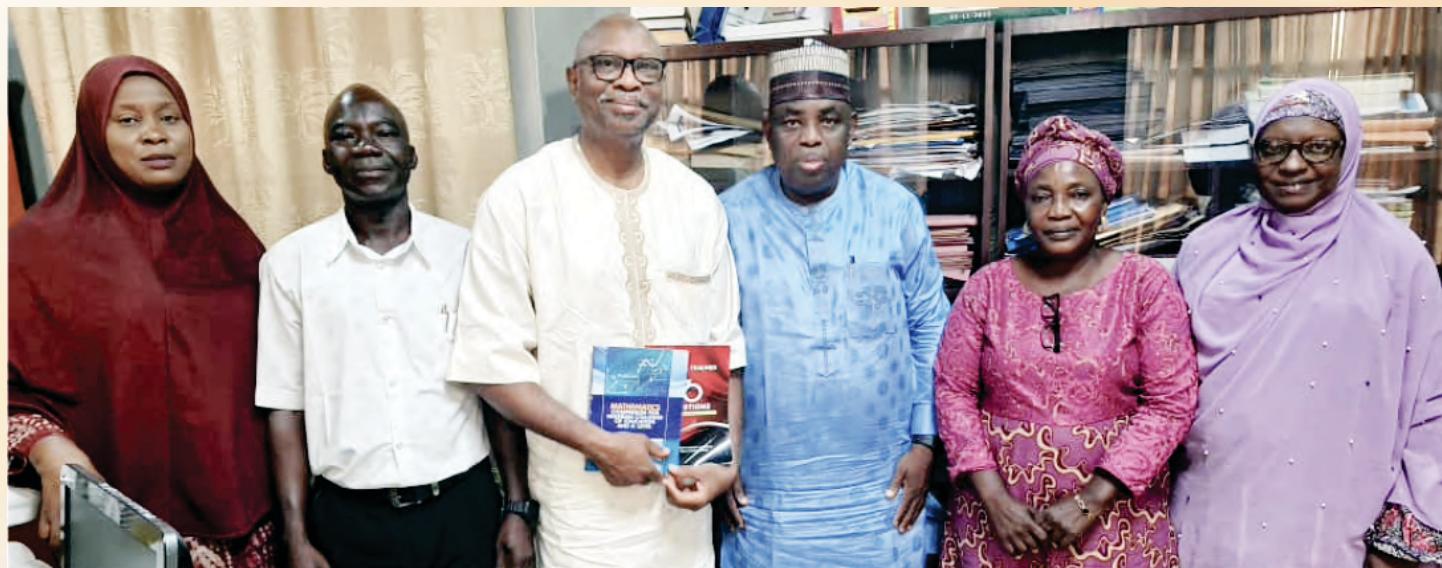

Prof. Joshua Kayode Olatoke, SAN, also said that the life of the Kuliyan Gari of Ilorin demonstrates that professional success must be complemented with compassion, humility and service to society, adding that the book is a timely reminder that true greatness lies in positively impacting lives.

Reviewing the book, a former Head of the Department of Mass Communication, University of Ilorin, and Proprietor/General Manager of Gari FM, Ilorin, Dr Mahmud Abdulraheem, described the presentation as apt and timely, saying that the life and contributions of the subject had been examined in a manner that vividly highlighted his immense impact on the growth and development of society and on the nurturing of young professionals.

A former Speaker of the Kwara State House of Assembly, Prof. Ali Ahmad, who represented the former President of the 8th Senate, Dr Bukola Saraki, said that instead of merely enjoying his resources, the senior lawyer had chosen to deploy them for the benefit of others.

"Students and young ones, if you find yourselves being mentored by Yusuf Ali, count yourselves lucky, not only in monetary terms but also in association. What is curious about him is that he is not the richest lawyer in Ilorin, Kwara State and Nigeria by extension, yet he never stops sparing a thought for others," he said.

Egbewole, Emir of Ilorin, Al-Hikmah founder, others attend "Kuliyan Gari" book launch

In his remarks, the Emir of Ilorin, Alhaji Ibrahim Sulu-Gambari, expressed delight at the presentation of a book dedicated to teaching the values and principles of mentorship, noting that it would contribute significantly to educating youths on good conduct and responsible living within the society.

The monarch observed that the book launch also coincided with the celebration of the conferment of the title of Kuliya Ngari of Ilorin on Prof. Yusuf Ali, SAN, which was bestowed on him by the Emir last year.

Represented by the Balogun Alanamu of Ilorin, Dr Usman Atolagbe Jos, the Emir said the honouree had been exceptionally kind to the people of Ilorin.

"He has been so useful to both Muslims and Christians in Ilorin. As he continues his kind gestures, we receive constant feedback at the palace. We appreciate him and pray that Almighty Allah guides and grants him long life," he said.

Also speaking, an associate of the honouree, Mr Adebayo Adelodun, SAN, lauded the legendary generosity of his colleague towards mentees, institutions and individuals.

"He lives a life of purpose, dignity and discipline. His middle name is generosity—of spirit and of purse," he said.

In his remarks, one of his mentees, Kehinde Eleja, SAN, said the honouree taught him the ABC of legal practice, describing him as "a mentor, supporter and carer. Someone I can rightly call my father. He has not only taught me how to catch fish, he still assists me in catching fish and treats me like a baby. That is very unusual," he added.

Earlier in his address, the author of the book, Comrade Abdulkareem, represented by an Assistant Director of Information at the University of Ilorin and former Vice Chairman of the Kwara State NUJ, Mr Mustafa Abubakar, said the exemplary philosophical spirit and lifestyle of the awardee inspired him to write the book.

He explained that the publication is aimed at reawakening the consciousness of the public towards living purposeful lives and doing good for the benefit of society.

In his response, Mallam Yusuf Ali, SAN, said he would not take credit for his humanitarianism, ascribing everything to Allah.

"Any occasion people talk about me, I become confused and troubled, because nobody can make himself. It is only God who counts one kind-hearted in the eyes of humanity. I, therefore, consider myself very, very lucky," he said.

The Kuliyan Gari of Ilorin further stated that every human being is destined to fulfil God's purpose in life, noting that the line between good and bad individuals is often very thin, and urged all to contribute their quota to societal growth and development.

Guests at the launch and the unveiling, through their representatives, praised the philanthropy of Yusuf Ali, SAN, and extolled his virtues of selflessness, compassion and unwavering commitment to youth development.

UNILORIN ASUU welcomes new agreement with FG

By Abubakar Imam

The Chairman of the University of Ilorin Branch of the Academic Staff Union of Universities (ASUU), Dr Alex Morenikeji Akanmu, has welcomed the new agreement the Union's national body signed with the Federal Government last Wednesday (January 14, 2026) in Abuja.

Dr Akanmu described the agreement as not just a landmark event but a historic episode that would have far reaching impact on the nation's university system.

Speaking with UNILORIN Bulletin in a telephone chat, Dr Akanmu, who is also the Ag. Director of Student Affairs, said that what is left is the anticipated full implementation of the agreement, which had hitherto taken the two parties several years and efforts to attain.

While saying that it is not yet uhuru, Dr Akanmu expressed the conviction that the implementation of the agreement would bring about peace on the nation's university campuses at least for the next few years.

Dr Akanmu, who commended his colleagues for their patience over the years, expressed the hope that the agreement would be fully implemented.

He noted that the whole world is aware of the latest development and that there should be no reneging on the agreement by either of the parties, particularly the Federal Government, which is its implementor.

Dr Akanmu was particularly delighted with the new pension model for those that would retire in the rank of Professor, saying that it would have significant positive impact on the lives of those who are devoting all they have to generating new leaders.

The Minister of Education, Dr Tunji Alausa, had earlier unveiled the signed agreement between the Federal Government and ASUU, which concludes the renegotiation of the 2009 FGN-ASUU Agreement.

President Tinubu

Dr Akanmu

The key highlights of the agreement include 40% salary increase for academic staff and improvement in pension benefits, which would see professors earn pension equivalent of their annual salary at their retirement age of 70.

The agreement also covers better university funding models with dedicated allocations for research, libraries, labs equipment, and staff development and the establishment of a proposed National Research Council (NRC) to fund research with at least 1% of the country's GDP.

Also included in the agreement is specific arrangement that would promote stronger university autonomy and academic freedom among lecturers as it also says that eligibility for academic leadership positions such as Deans of Faculties and Provosts of Colleges of Medicine/Health Sciences would be open to only those who have attained the rank of Professor.

The agreement took effect from January 1, 2026, and it is subject to review after three years.

It was also resolved that there would be no victimisation of anyone involved in the struggle during the course of drafting the new agreement.

The event was attended by several dignitaries, particularly Principal Officers of Federal Government-owned universities, including the Registrar of the University of Ilorin, Mr Mansur Adeleke Alfanla.
